Dear Mr. Ayala:

This last chapter in the Barea epic is too much. I have just written to Mrs. Anthea Joseph, of Michael Joseph, Ltd., asking if we can count on their collaboration in beginning over again with a new translator, as we ourselves are resolved to do. I suggested, la forme, that she verify the facts herself, but I made it plain that we mean to proceed with a new translation at once, except in the most unlikely event that the Barea manuscript actually exists and can be put into our hands.

Meanwhile, I should very much appreciate any suggestions you might have for a suitable translator. I shall be thinking about the matter myself in the next few days, and then hope to have the pleasure of conferring to you.

Cordially,

Emile Capouya
